

Steps to Obtain a CDL or Endorsement for Entry-Level Drivers

On February 7, 2022, FMCSA implemented new entry-level driver training (ELDT) regulations that require individuals subject to the regulations to obtain training from a training provider listed on the Training Provider Registry. State Driver Licensing Agencies (SDLAs) must verify training completion through the Training Provider Registry before administering the applicable CDL skills or the hazardous materials endorsement knowledge test.

Below are steps that CDL applicants subject to ELDT typically go through to obtain a CDL or endorsement.

APPLICATION PROCESS

Class A, B CDLs and P, S Endorsements

- 1 Knowledge Test
Driver passes knowledge test at the SDLA
- 2 CLP
SDLA issues CLP
Note: Federal regulations do not require CDL applicants to complete entry-level driver theory training before applying for their CLP
- 3 ELDT
CLP holder completes ELDT courses
- 4 Certify
Training provider submits the training certification record to the Training Provider Registry
- 5 Verify
SDLA verifies completion of required training using State IT system or CSTIMS
- 6 Skills/Road Test
CLP holder passes skills and road test
- 7 CDL/Endorsement
SDLA issues CDL or endorsement

APPLICATION PROCESS

H Endorsement

- 1 TSA Check
Driver TSA Security Threat Assessment is approved, background check completed
Note: Driver is not required to complete this prior to taking ELDT
- 2 ELDT
Driver completes the H endorsement training
- 3 Certify
Training provider submits the training certification record to the Training Provider Registry
- 4 Verify
SDLA verifies completion of required training using State IT system or CSTIMS
- 5 Test
Driver passes the H knowledge test
- 6 Endorsement
SDLA issues H endorsement on CDL credential

? To determine which CDL applicants are subject to the ELDT regulations, view the ELDT Applicability Flow Chart.